WINNERS

Sergeant James Clarke

Kenneth Cobb

Yolanda Johnson-Peterkin

Jennifer Lenihan

Dina Maniotis

Anita Reyes

Eric Smalls

Since 1973, the Fund for the City of New York's Public Service Awards Program has honored outstanding civil servants whose work performance and commitment to the public are extraordinary — they give their all each day, year after year. In honoring these winners, we also acknowledge the contribution and sacrifice of the hundreds of thousands of dedicated public servants who, with integrity and devotion, perform the work that keeps this complex city, the largest and most densely populated in the United States, running.

Sloan Public Service Award Winners demonstrate extraordinary service delivered with ingenuity, energy and compassion; responsiveness to public needs by cutting through red tape or developing more effective methods of service delivery; outstanding and reliable performance both under the pressures of daily routine and in times of crisis; willingness to take risks, if that is what is needed, to improve service or correct abuses or inequities; the ability to adapt to change and provide a continued high standard of service to the public; and commitment to upholding the public interest amidst competing interests, pressures and demands.

This year's winners, and the 308 winners from the previous 50 years, were selected from among more than 325,000 eligible workers in the mayoral agencies, Transit and Housing Authorities, Health and Hospitals Corporation, City University of New York, district attorneys' offices and public libraries. Winners come from all levels and ranks of New York City's government with priority given to individuals who have made a career of public service.

To nominate a person, provide a description of the candidate, including significant career information, the particular achievements that occasion the nomination, and the qualities the nominee embodies.

Names go into a reserve pool, and each nominee is reviewed in due course. Recommendations, once made, need not be renewed.

The names of City employees who emerge with the strongest recommendations are submitted to the Selection Panel, an independent group of distinguished leaders who draw upon their experience with and knowledge of government. In deliberating and choosing the winners, panel members are guided by extensive profiles of each nominee that detail achievements, as well as panelists' own insights and evaluations.

The Fund for the City of New York is grateful to the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation for its 36 years of generous support for this program, which has elevated the recognition of City employees and is widely referred to as the Nobel Prize of City government.

2023 SLOAN PUBLIC SERVICE AWARD WINNERS

ORDINARY NEW YORKERS DOING EXTRAORDINARY THINGS

SERGEANT JAMES CLARKE

COMMUNITY AFFAIRS OFFICER
NYC POLICE DEPARTMENT

Some people experience a moment in their lives that puts them on their life's course. For Sergeant James Clarke, that happened in his hometown of Queens, as a senior at August Martin High School. When the New York City Police Department (NYPD) gave a presentation to his class, Sgt. Clarke's path was set—he took the entrance exam immediately after graduating. He began his career with the NYPD in 1983, and served in Queens until transitioning to the 32nd Precinct in Harlem to work undercover in street enforcement of narcotics during the crack epidemic. That experience was another inflection point—Sgt. Clarke wondered about how he could best engage with civilians. He pivoted to working alongside communities and became a plain-clothes detective in Bedford-Stuyvesant. A promotion to sergeant in 1998 led him to work in Crown Heights for 10 years, overseeing responses to domestic violence cases. To help people feel comfortable calling the NYPD, he became a constant presence at community events, took part in food and toy drives, and ran the NYPD's Youth Police Academy. In 2010, Sgt. Clarke took on his current role as a Community Affairs Officer in Queens. He is at the helm of the Youth Police Academy there, and was honored last year for his work—he was named a "Hometown Hero" by the New York Daily News. "He kept kids engaged during the pandemic, when the isolation of everything really challenged young people," said Coleen Babb, Executive Assistant District Attorney of the Community Partnerships Division, Queens District Attorney's Office. "And it was meaningful, too. This time coincided with greater demands for social justice due to the death of George Floyd. Sgt. Clarke embraced having honest and tough conversations about social justice with those kids."

KENNETH COBB

ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER
NYC DEPARTMENT OF RECORDS & INFORMATION SERVICES

Kenneth Cobb was born in Poughkeepsie, New York. He loved history at an early age—and that love turned into a career when he explored the Municipal Archives as a Columbia University graduate student. He began volunteering at the Archives in 1977 and has held several roles over 44 years there, culminating in his present post as the Assistant Commissioner. He has been instrumental in turning the Municipal Archives at the Department of Records and Information Services (DORIS) into the largest local government archive in North America and a vital, highly accessible resource for professional and amateur researchers worldwide. He monitors the response to queries for information and services; negotiates license agreements for all uses of DORIS materials; appraises records for archival value; conducts specialized research for the mayor's office, executive office, and patrons; and much more. Over his decades of service, Mr. Cobb has identified and transferred more than 120,000 cubic feet and over 300 terabytes of records to the Archives collections. He has been honored by many organizations, including the New York Academy of History and the Archivists Round Table of Metropolitan New York. "The first thing you notice about the New York City Municipal Archives is that they're so open and welcoming—so generously helpful," said SUNY Purchase College history professor Lisa Keller. "And that's because of Ken Cobb. He created that environment throughout his long career with DORIS. He has not only been critical in transforming the Municipal Archives—he's transformed the model of what archives should be."

YOLANDA JOHNSON-PETERKIN

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF HOUSING INITIATIVES
NYC MAYOR'S OFFICE OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE

Yolanda Johnson-Peterkin is the Executive Director of Housing Initiatives in the Mayor's Office of Criminal Justice. She leads policies and programs to improve housing opportunities for the 750,000 New Yorkers with justice histories. Ms. Johnson-Peterkin began her civil service career in 2015 as Chief of Housing and Community Activities for the Family Re-entry Program at the New York City Housing Authority. She successfully reunited almost 200 released individuals with their family members living in NYCHA—this program was nationally recognized because it led to low rates of recidivism. Ms. Johnson-Peterkin's personal mission of supporting formerly incarcerated people has been core to her career. She has helped women with criminal justice involvement earn college degrees and supported the restoration of Pell grants for incarcerated students. She regularly speaks across the country about prison reform, social justice, and women's pathways to freedom. Her career trajectory and achievements are rooted in formative early experiences. Raised in Brooklyn's East New York and Brownsville neighborhoods, Ms. Johnson-Peterkin left high school early to escape that violent environment, which led to choices she is not proud of. Those experiences, however, led Ms. Johnson-Peterkin to turn turmoil into triumph. She participated in Shock boot camp and graduated—from there, she became unstoppable. She earned a GED and associate's, bachelor's, and master's degrees, and was later elevated to an ordained minister. Ms. Johnson-Peterkin is known as a "force of nature" and a "deeply transformative figure" by her colleagues. "She has used her passion, her moral certainty, and her incredible powers of persuasion to convince others that everyone has a right to a second chance," said Karen Patterson, former Deputy Director of NYCHA's Family Partnership Department.

JENNIFER LENIHAN

SENIOR ADVISOR / ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER
NYC MAYOR'S OFFICE OF MEDIA & ENTERTAINMENT

Jennifer Lenihan was born and raised in Albany, New York. From a young age, she knew she wanted to be involved in the film industry, and she has lived her dream—she is now in her 27th year at the Mayor's Office of Media and Entertainment (MOME). She has held numerous roles at MOME, working up from her first job as Permit Area Coordinator at the Film Office to her current position as Senior Advisor/Assistant Commissioner liaising across the five divisions of MOME: the Film Office, NYC Media, the Office of Nightlife, the Press Credentials Office, and Creative Sector Programs and Initiatives. Her accomplishments include managing location filming requests between city agencies and production companies, encompassing countless feature films, commercials, television shows, music videos, theater and still photography projects during her tenure. She also developed the "Made in New York" Production Assistant Training Program, which offers a pathway into the industry for underrepresented communities, and significantly streamlined permit applications by moving them online. Her work has been a significant driver of economic success—in 2019, the film/media industry brought in a record $82 billion, and the number of films/tv productions for 2022 rebounded to near pre-pandemic levels. "No one currently working in City government has had a more longstanding impact on the success of the media and entertainment industry in New York City than Jennifer Lenihan," said Anne del Castillo, Commissioner, Mayor's Office of Media & Entertainment. "Jen is a service-oriented, thoughtful, deliberating, tinkering problem-solver with a keen attention to detail and judgment, both on the practical and political level."

DINA MANIOTIS

EXECUTIVE DEPUTY COMMISSIONER AND CHIEF OF STAFF
NYC OFFICE OF CHIEF MEDICAL EXAMINER

Some people avoid crises, but Dina Maniotis faces them head-on. Originally from Montreal, Quebec, Ms. Maniotis began her career as a counselor at Catholic Charities of Brooklyn & Queens, addressing issues that ranged from homelessness to the trauma of 9/11 to youth violence. In 2006, she was hired by the Office of Emergency Management (OEM) as the Director of Emergency Services to develop crisis response plans for everything from hurricanes to terrorist attacks. In 2011, Ms. Maniotis was promoted to Assistant Commissioner for OEM and developed a system, activated during Hurricanes Irene and Sandy, to track over 140,000 city employees who volunteered to serve in 500 public shelters in case of a disaster event. Ms. Maniotis took on her current role as Executive Deputy Commissioner and Chief of Staff for the New York City Office of Chief Medical Examiner (OCME) in 2013. When New York City became the epicenter of the Covid-19 pandemic in 2020, Ms. Maniotis was already prepared with sufficient PPE—and although OCME staff handled decedents who were still infectious and worked on the front lines with hospitals, no employees died due to COVID-19. Out of need, Ms. Maniotis reassigned staff from Toxicology and Molecular Genetics operations to decedent management and coordinated with the National Guard in the collection, storage, and caretaking of decedents. “She was the main person working to bring refrigerated trailers to hospitals, maintain and increase OCME’s own morgue capacities, and ensure that not a single decedent was lost during the entirety of the pandemic,” said Dr. Barbara Sampson, former Chief Medical Examiner.

ANITA REYES

ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER OF HEALTH FOR THE BRONX
NYC DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND MENTAL HYGIENE

Anita Reyes is a Bronx native, though as a small child she spent several years in the Dominican Republic, the country from which both her parents emigrated. Growing up in the Morrisania/Hunts Point area of the South Bronx in the 1970s and 80s was not easy. The Bronx was burning, and Anita saw it all: the drug use, the abandoned buildings, and most tragically, the violence. As a teenager, she lost two siblings, an older sister and a younger brother, to the plague of gun violence. In 1998, shortly after graduating from St. John's University, she began working for the NYC Department of Health and Mental Hygiene (DOHMH). As a Public Health Advisor she worked with tuberculosis patients to make sure they were following important protocols, in addition to providing training for healthcare workers and community organizations. The next stage of her career focused on asthma prevention and mitigation in northern Manhattan and the South Bronx, both of which have some of the highest asthma rates in the country. After later serving as Executive Director for the Bronx Neighborhood Health Action Center, Anita was appointed DOHMH's Assistant Commissioner of Health for the Bronx. The greatest public health challenge she's faced has been COVID-19, and its catastrophic impact on the Bronx—home to many essential and frontline workers—cannot be overstated. In the earliest days of the pandemic, Anita led one of the first outdoor rapid testing operations in the city, and then helped launch mobile pop-up testing sites across the Bronx. In January 2021, she was selected to lead one of the city's first 24/7 mass vaccination sites in Manhattan. "Anita's deep, deep love and commitment for her community is always apparent," said Emiko Otsubo, Chief Operating Officer for DOHMH. "She is really the whole package when it comes to being a public health advocate."

ERIC SMALLS

CHIEF TECHNOLOGY OFFICER
NYC EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT

Eric Smalls was born and raised in the Bronx. Mr. Smalls took on various private sector tech roles until the tragedy of 9/11 led him to shift to public service. In 2002, he was hired by the New York City Office of Emergency Management—now known as NYC Emergency Management (NYCEM)—which lost all its IT infrastructure during 9/11. He took on the massive task of building a brand-new state-of-the-art backup system. Mr. Smalls went on to hold a variety of roles at NYCEM, leading up to his current position as the Chief Technology Officer. Mr. Smalls' accomplishments at NYCEM include his role in the development and deployment of NYCEM's Emergency Operations Center (EOC), configuring and deploying the technology to support the Healthcare Facility Evacuation Center (HEC) at NYCEM during Hurricane Sandy, and coordinating the deployment of IT infrastructure to support the Disaster Assistance Service Center (DASC) at the vacant DMV building in lower Manhattan to provide human services to relocated Hurricane Katrina survivors. When the Covid-19 pandemic hit, Mr. Smalls coordinated the agency's move to the cloud and served on the steering committee to develop and implement the agency's remote work policies. He also oversaw a team that deployed and supported the technology for mass-healthcare sites such as the Javits Center, and he built a virtual call center network to help healthcare workers locate hotels for safe quarantine or isolation. "I think we all strive to have the type of dedication that Eric Smalls has," said Mark Frankel, a former colleague and direct report. "He knows the importance of the mission of the agency, but it's very personal for him. For Eric, all of New York City is his family. He approaches every emergency as if his family was in need."

KENNETH COBB

THE CANDIDATE'S REFLECTIONS

"During my many decades of public service, I have literally learned something new every day about the historical treasures of the Archives and have endeavored to share that knowledge. I help researchers find the document that solves a mystery or provides closure, and I guide patrons to the collections that tell the story of New York's 400-year history. That's what's kept me here at the Department of Records and Information Services for all these years."

SUPPORTING STATEMENTS

Eric Washington, Researcher and Member of the Archives Reference and Research Advisory Board: "Anyone who knows the Municipal Archives must surely know as well that Ken Cobb is its most ardent steward. For some three decades or more he has steered the transformation of the city's memory bank from a daunting storehouse to a more user-friendly and exciting treasury worthy of a great city in the modern age."

Lisa Keller, SUNY Purchase College History Professor: "There's nobody who knows the history of New York City better than Ken Cobb. And I think there's nobody more dedicated to helping others learn about that history. He has an enduring belief that the knowledge of the city's past can be a tremendous force for good in guiding its current and future choices. And he's put all his energies, all his remarkable personal and professional skills, into bringing that knowledge to the broadest, most diverse populations."

Kenneth Jackson, Columbia Professor of History and Social Sciences: "Ken Cobb has a passion for helping others. He has personally helped countless historians with the research on their projects. To this day, whenever a young historian or history student comes to me with questions about city history research, I tell them, 'Make an appointment with Ken Cobb at the Municipal Archives. He's not just the best source, he really cares.' I don't have to look up Ken's phone number for them. I know it by heart."

SERGEANT JAMES CLARKE

THE CANDIDATE'S REFLECTIONS

"There's one key ingredient for being a New York City Police Officer: You need to be blessed with a good heart so that you can treat people the way that you would want to be treated if you had to call the police. People call the police when they cannot handle the situation themselves."

SUPPORTING STATEMENTS

Coleen Babb, Executive Assistant District Attorney of the Community Partnerships Division, Queens District Attorney's Office: "Sgt. Clarke has such a genuine and real heart for working with kids and helping them overcome skepticism and distrust of the police. He is a credible, caring, and trusted messenger for the New York City Police Department."

Detective Tanya Duhaney, Community Affairs Bureau, NYPD: "You should not take this job if you're not going to think of others before you think of yourself. Sgt. Clarke lives that. He has so much compassion, so much love for the community. We need to clone Sgt. Clarke so that when he retires in the future, we don't lose what he brings to the community of Queens South."

Rev. William Armstead, First Church of God in Christ, St. Albans, Queens: "Sgt. Clarke has a heart for young people. He knows how to put them onto a path of being assets for society. He is also a natural teacher. He mentors younger officers and shows them how to collaborate and get to know their community. He builds bridges between the police and the community."

Sgt. Gregory Jones, NYPD Patrol Borough Queens North: "He just lights up a room when he walks into it. [...] His approach and the calm mannerism that he has shows the level of respect he has for everyone. He speaks to people. He gets to know people. He made me want to be a better cop."

YOLANDA JOHNSON-PETERKIN

THE CANDIDATE'S REFLECTIONS

"I wanted to model not only how to turn a life around, but how to turn entire communities around. [...] I started out to work as an advocate for change because I've been there, and I think that helped to make me effective. Now I'm an advocate for change because it's just the right thing to do."

SUPPORTING STATEMENTS

Dan Hafetz, Senior Counsel to the NYCHA General Counsel: "Yolanda respects everyone, and everyone wants to support her. I'm a better person for having known her. And the more I know her, the better person I become."

Karen Patterson, former Deputy Director, NYCHA Family Partnerships Department: "With a two-person staff, Yolanda busted out the Re-entry Program and made it an absolutely outstanding success. [...] With her energy, conviction, compassion, dedication, she just makes you—makes everyone—want to stand up and stand right."

Marvin Abram, Pastor, United Missionary Baptist Church, Brooklyn: "Yolanda has a passion to advocate for those who are displaced economically, socially, and educationally. [...] Her willingness to sacrifice her quality of life so others can have a life defines her character."

Margaret diZerega, Initiative Director, Center for Sentencing and Corrections and Unlocking Potential at the Vera Institute of Justice: "She just makes you think better, see things in a different perspective. Broader, more compassionate. She sort of wraps her arm around you and makes you feel you're part of something vital. Her motto is Keep Hope Alive, and she absolutely does that for everyone she encounters."

JENNIFER LENIHAN

THE CANDIDATE'S REFLECTIONS

"The big question for me is: How do we support the film industry in New York, which in turn supports a lot of jobs and economic development in our City? [...] You have to constantly evolve and grow to meet the demands of a pretty fast-paced and constantly pivoting environment. I love being able to find and fill gaps where I can as our agency continues to expand."

SUPPORTING STATEMENTS

Anne del Castillo, Commissioner, Mayor's Office of Media & Entertainment: "No one currently working in City government has had a more longstanding impact on the success of the media and entertainment industry in New York City than Jennifer Lenihan. Jen is a service-oriented, thoughtful, deliberating, tinkering problem-solver [...]."

Aaron Shiffman, Executive Director, Brooklyn Workforce Innovations: "Jen is the ultimate trouble-shooter [...]. And more than anything, she approaches her work with a strong sense of intentionality and investment in how the media industry has a tremendous impact economically on the lifeblood of New York City and individually with the people who come through her office in the Made in NY PA training program. She is committed and unflappable."

Katherine Oliver, Principal, Bloomberg Associates: "Jennifer is innovative, strategic, creative, a great listener, diplomatic, and a tremendous people person. She was the glue that I could use to put everything together when I became the Commissioner of the agency."

Celina Sze, Production Coordinator, Mayor's Office of Media & Entertainment: "Jennifer has the ability to make everyone feel heard. Whether that's someone like me, who began as an intern working for her, a film production staff member, an aspiring P.A., or a community member."

DINA MANIOTIS

THE CANDIDATE'S REFLECTIONS

"My passion is for doing good. To me, the most valuable life that you can lead is a life dedicated to service. And to be effective in my job, you have to ultimately love humanity. You have to be relentless. You have to be tough. You have to be willing to work as hard as you can to get things done."

SUPPORTING STATEMENTS

Dr. Jason Graham, Chief Medical Examiner, NYC Office of Chief Medical Examiner: "Over the entirety of my career in public service to the City of New York and now as the head of a City agency, I have encountered no single individual who so effectively makes government work to 'get stuff done' for those we serve more than Dina Maniotis."

Joe Bruno, former Commissioner, NYC Office of Emergency Management: "Dina is a force of nature. She is a person who will spare no effort to work on behalf of the people of New York. She's intellectually curious and always searching for ways to make grand improvements to systems of a large scale."

Frank DePaolo, Deputy Commissioner for Forensic Operations & Investigations: "There is not a person in New York City that would have had the ability to respond to the COVID-19 pandemic in our office as effectively as Dina Maniotis. She has worked tirelessly throughout her career and the operations of our agency cannot function without her."

Kelly McKinney, Assistant Vice President of Emergency Management + Enterprise Resilience, NYU Langone Health: "After more than two decades in the disaster business, I know of no person more deserving of this prestigious award than Dina. She has dedicated her career, and indeed her life, to serving the people of the City of New York."

ANITA REYES

THE CANDIDATE'S REFLECTIONS

"I am always wondering how we can work on a hyper-local level to tackle the public health challenges of our Bronx neighborhoods. How can we better partner with different groups in the community? How do we actually engage with, not just talk to, the community? If we truly care about promoting health equity, we must be willing collaborators and be willing to listen and work with one another."

SUPPORTING STATEMENTS

Dr. Michelle Morse, Chief Medical Officer, NYC Health: "Anita is thoughtful, generous, and humble, and above all, one of the most dedicated public servants I have ever encountered. She exemplifies what it means to be a public servant."

Dr. Jane Bedell, former Assistant Commissioner, Bronx Neighborhood Health Action Center: "Anita straddles the line between the big-picture world and the nitty-gritty details world. She understands the larger policy pushes and pulls, but also knows how to advocate for specific peoples and communities for public health."

Emiko Otsubo, Chief Operating Officer and Executive Deputy Commissioner, NYC Health: "Anita's deep, deep love and commitment for her community is always apparent. She always puts other people first and is civically minded. She really is the whole package when it comes to being a public health advocate."

Dr. Torian Easterling, First Deputy Commissioner, NYC Health: "Anita understands how to uplift the strengths and assets of her community. She doesn't just speak about deficits. She brings a community-centered and caring vision to her work. She sees herself in the community she's serving."

ERIC SMALLS

THE CANDIDATE'S REFLECTIONS

"In my role, I get to be creative. But to see your creativity make a real difference is what continues to motivate me. If I do what I do to the best of my ability, it indirectly saves the lives of some and improves the quality of life for others. My role is to do what I can to make sure our first responders have the best tools possible so that when they run out the door during an emergency, they can directly save lives."

SUPPORTING STATEMENTS

Henry Jackson, Chief Operating Officer, NYCEM: "Eric Smalls helped to build a particular culture at this agency. It's a culture of wanting to help in the most trying times and not hesitating when that bell rings and we need to be all in. He's an exemplary leader who knows this agency from the ground up."

Mark Frankel, former colleague and direct report; current Information Security Risk Lead, CLS Bank: "I think we all strive to have the type of dedication that Eric Smalls has. He knows the importance of the mission of the agency, but it's very personal for him. For Eric, all of New York City is his family. He approaches every emergency as if his family was in need."

Yokarina Duarte, Chief of Staff, NYCEM: "No problem is too small or too big for Eric, and he listens to what is needed to come up with the best solutions. Eric is collaborative and detail-oriented. He understands how important technology is for an agency that coordinates emergency response citywide."

Garry Johnson, Network Engineering Manager, NYCEM: "Eric is a visionary. He is forward-thinking, always able to see the big picture and knows how to provide direction for leadership that he reports to and the staff that report to him. And he knows how to have a calm demeanor during the craziest of times so that the agency is always ready to go when needed."
